| Share Your Story! Have you encountered a unique or challenging situation in clinical? Write it up as a short case study and send it to Tonya ! She'll post it to the case study forum for everyone to discuss. | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Clinical Case Study #1 You have a student who is late to clinical on a regular basis; late in completing care to assigned patients; late to pre/post conferences. When counseled about the behavior, there is always a defensive excuse. How should this situation be handled? | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Clinical Case Study #2 One of your students (Amy) is assigned to a patient on a medical unit. You notice that each time the student makes contact with patients she calls them by their first name, shares coffee with them at the bedside and has a flippant attitude. You know that this casual behavior tends to make some patients feel disrespected and gives the impression that this is a "friend" relationship. How would you handle this situation? | 0 | 0 | 0 |
